CABERNET SAUVIGNON

VULCAN'S ANVIL is at Mile 178 on the Colorado River in the Grand Canyon protruding 50 feet from the calm pool that lies just before the river cascades into Lava Falls, the most dreaded rapids on the river. Vulcan's Anvil was created by massive lava flows damming the river and marking the landscape in the lower part of the canyon. Native Americans consider Vulcan's Anvil to be sacred and bad "juju" by simply touching it. Bad juju is not needed above Lava Falls. There is no bad juju in Sugar Creek's Cabernet Sauvignon, just a pleasant fruit-forward wine with soft tannins. It goes well with all red meats and barbecue.
